HER JOURNEY TO TRANSFORMATION

from human trafficking to healing - help Her Song bring her home

Trafficking victims have often been traumatized over a long period of time. The body, mind, and spirit are weary and need rest. And context matters. No one heals in isolation. We have beautiful homes where women can rest, reset and consider next steps with compassionate supportive people around them. This is a critical time because change is a challenging and dynamic process and she will need to be ready to engage in her future.

This year-long phase engages women in healing body, mind, and spirit in a safe community and place to belong. This time allows survivors to heal from trauma and move from a survival-based existence to an intentional lifestyle that focuses on physical and mental health and well being. Upon completion of this program, women have the opportunity to progress to our Independent Living Home where they can put their newly acquired skills into practice.

Here women continue in a supportive empowering community while independently exercising the life skills they have learned. Intentional support assists clients in expanding their education and career plans. This safe home includes appropriate support to assist women to take financial responsibility for themselves and build toward a sustainable future. This is the phase where survivors begin to live out their dreams.

We see her as she really is. Beautiful. Brave. Filled with potential. Where trafficking defined her as a commodity, we define her by LOVE which means we see her as she deserves to be seen. This drives everything we do.
